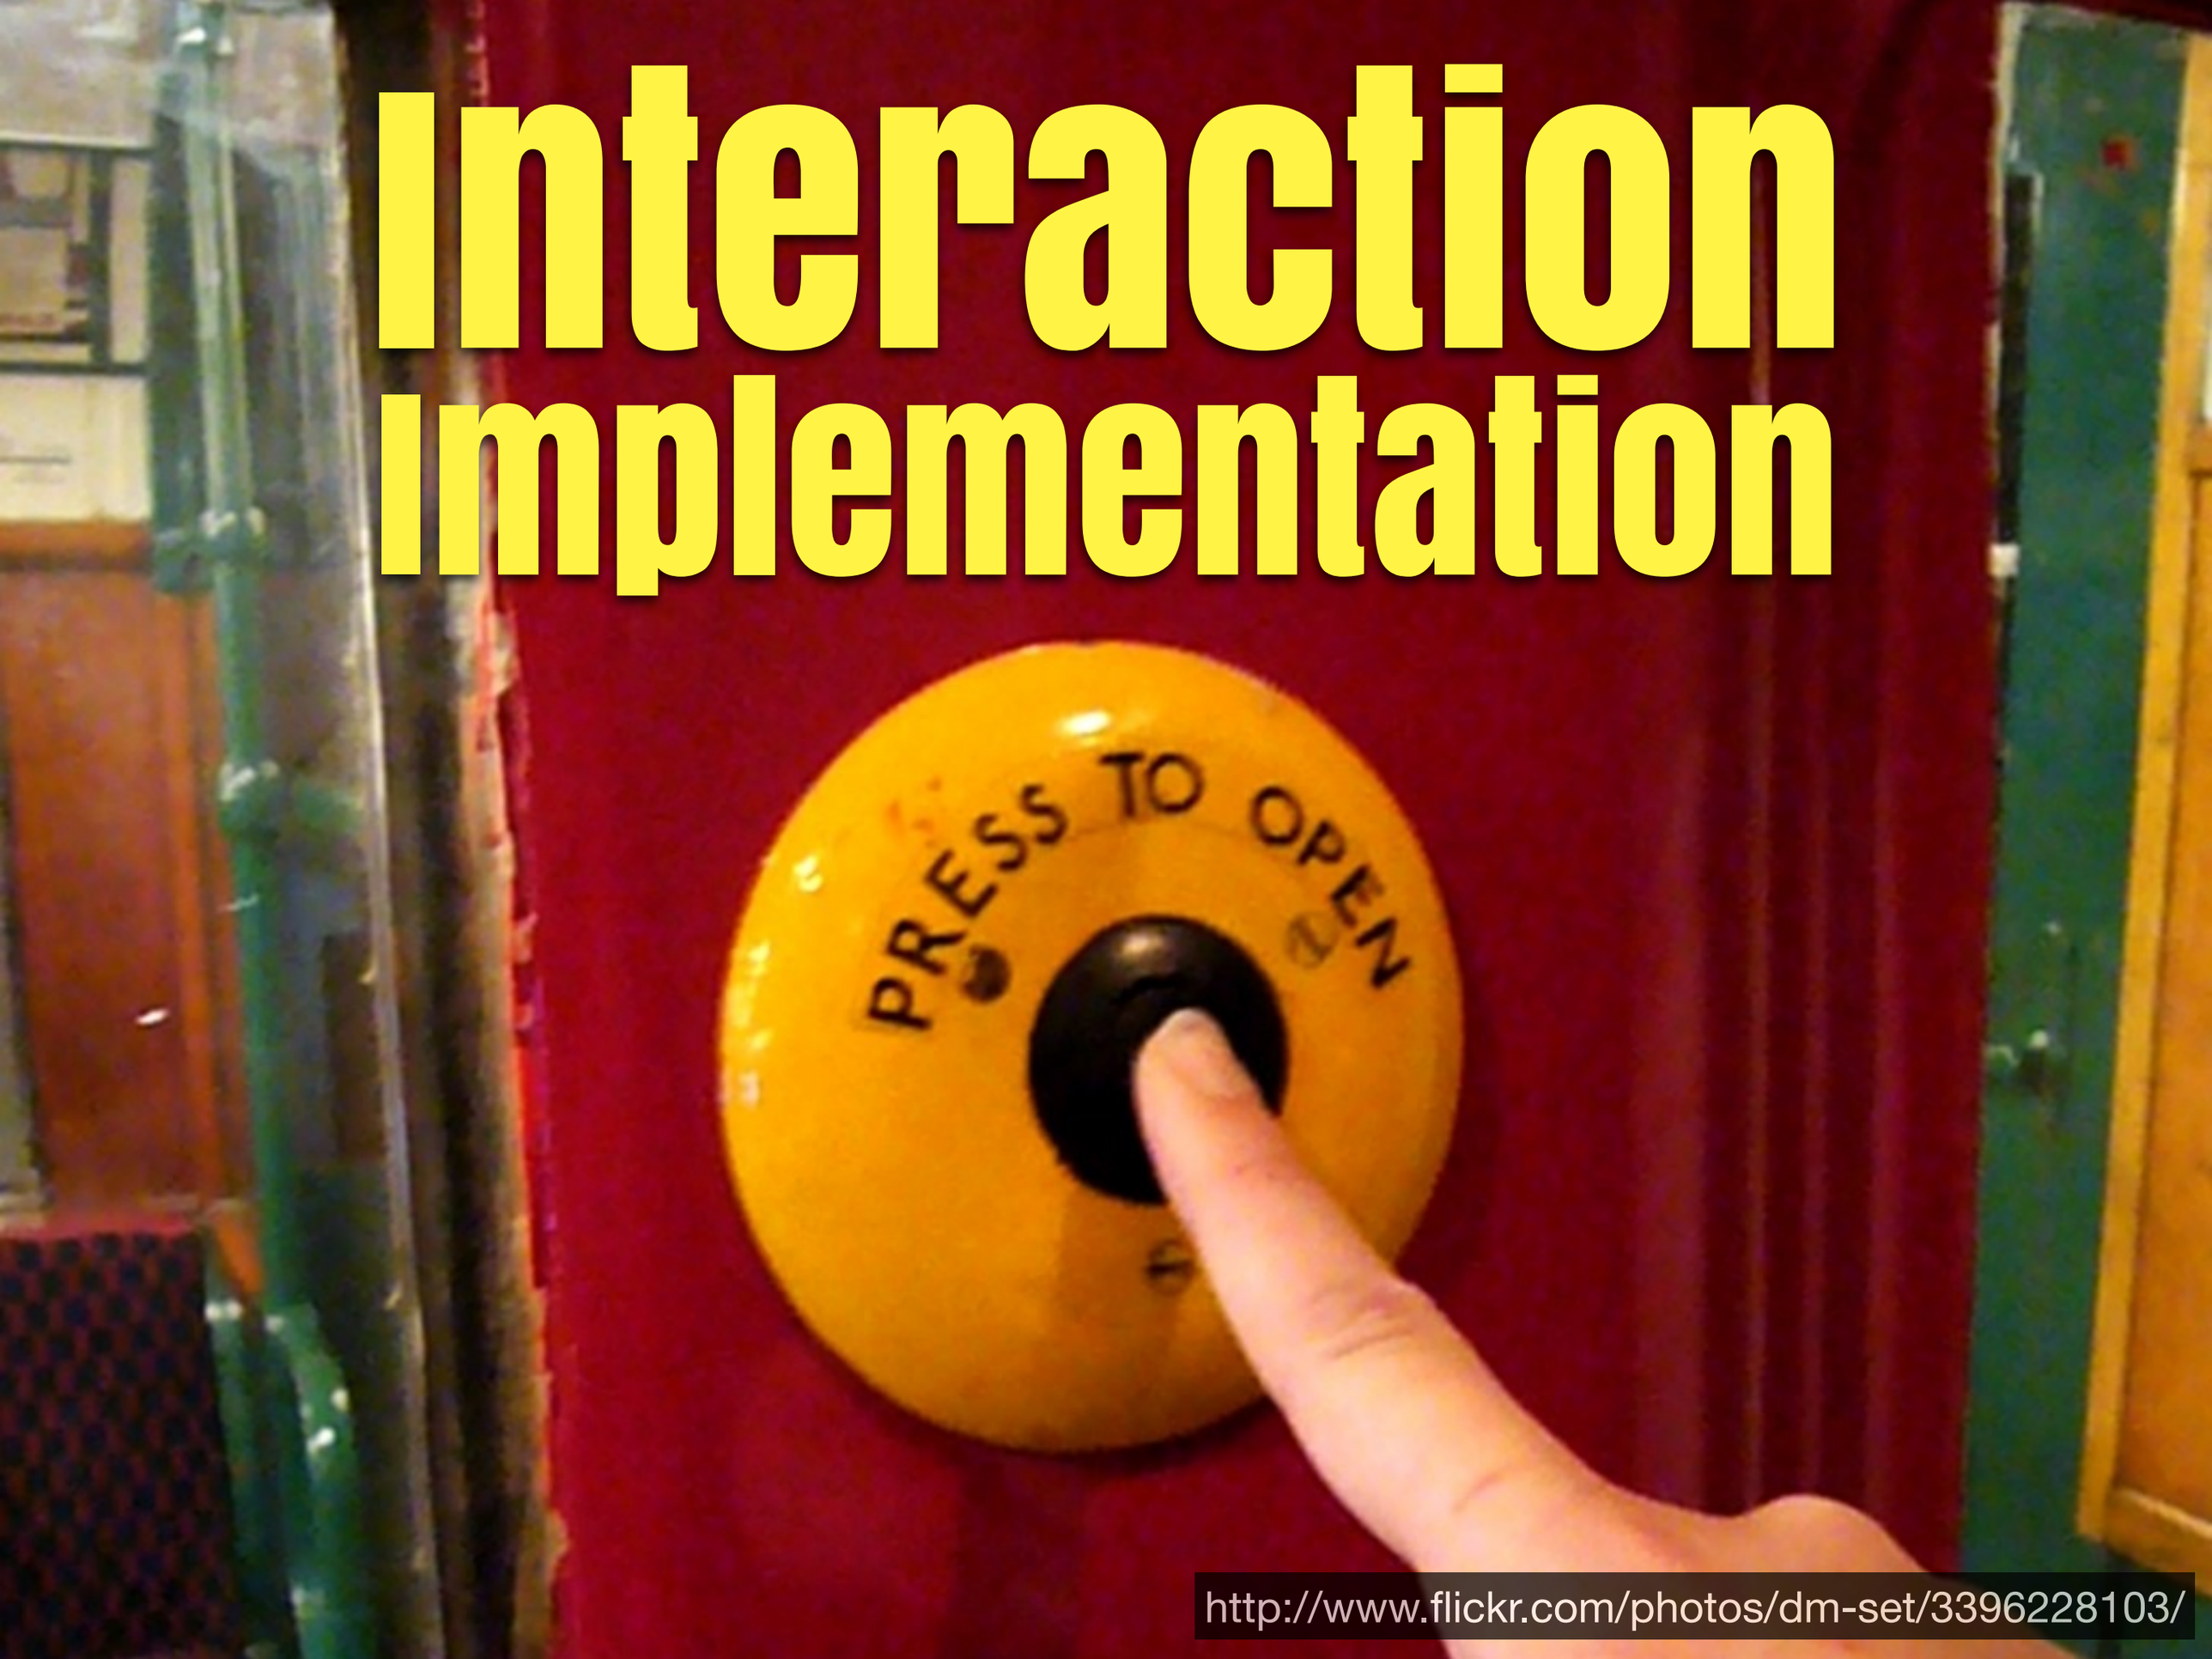
Interaction Implementation



http://www.flickr.com/photos/dm-set/3396228103/

Or more specifically:

How I go from a visual design (i.e. a mock) and make it a real weby thingy

But that's a crap title.

My Plan:

- Mock ➡ Developer
- Deconstructing the mock: work, risk, costs
- Approach to coding

http://www.flickr.com/photos/zervas/3848962977/

In my previous life I was a frackin' gangsta.

Deconstruct the design

what can't you see?

The invisibles will always bite you in the arse.

http://www.flickr.com/photos/remysharp/1163289602/

- What's clickable?
- What's touchable?
- What's the target platform?
- Browser support?

- Touch vs.
- Hold vs.
- Drag vs.
- Double tap over a tap hotspot vs...

http://www.flickr.com/photos/dannynic/3295160732/

Recommendation:
sit with client & drawing
and touch that.

Risk = screw ups = time = £

- When third parties are involved
- What you don't immediately know how to solve
- Where you can't visualise a solution

Costing

You.

You wish.

http://www.flickr.com/photos/deronkamisato/4965826757

Costing

- Never give quotes off the bat
- Break down into components
- Deadlines are a cost factor
- Cost IE6 separately

http://www.flickr.com/photos/deronkamisato/4965826757

Google support latest-1. So do I.

Add 40% for IE6 support

Estimates & Quotes

- Get it wrong first.
- Track your hours.
- compare to the quote.
- Repeat
- Mine was consistently out by 20%

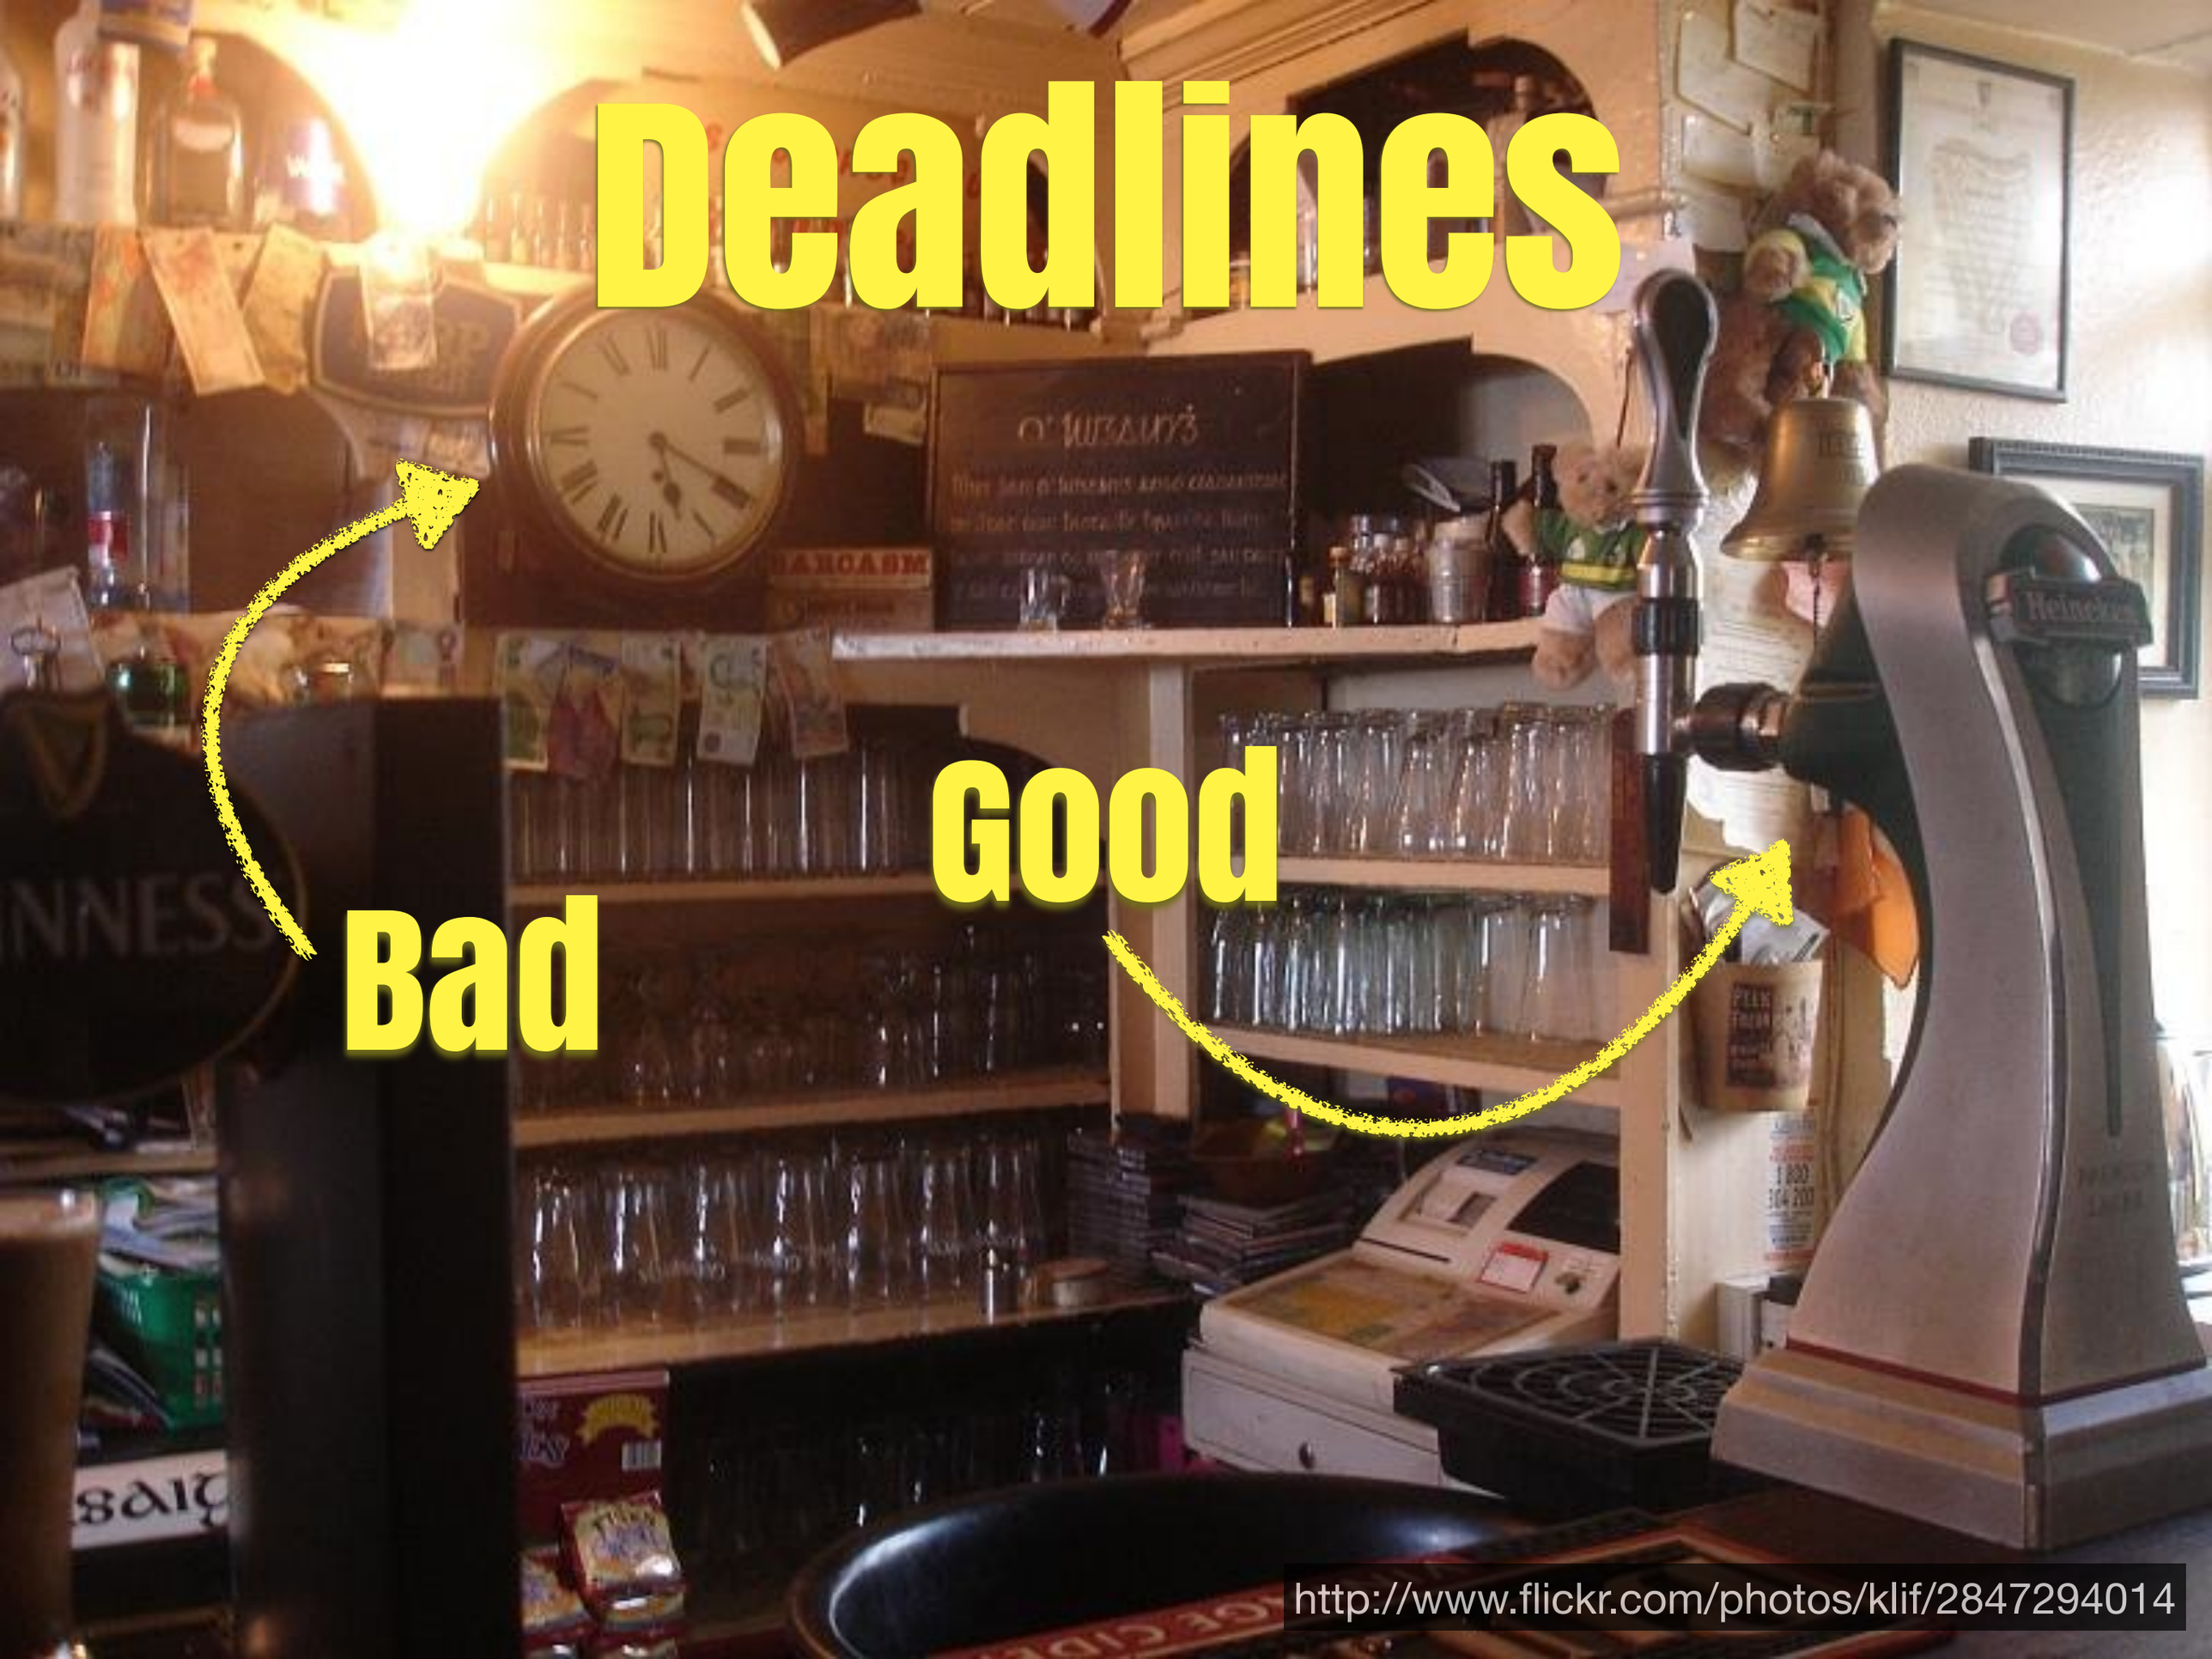
http://www.flickr.com/photos/pacdog/213744694/

Experience will help too :)

Deadlines

Bad

Good



http://www.flickr.com/photos/klif/2847294014

Deadlines

- Don't miss them
- Don't slip and slip and slip
- Very few deadlines can't be moved
- Urgent rarely means urgent

http://www.flickr.com/photos/klif/2847294014

Approach

Prototype early

jquery plugins

Good for fast prototyping

Quality is mixed, and often do way more than you need ixedit.com, jqueryfordesigners.com, try out some coding!

1. Build without jQuery.

2.Design the start and end of your effects without jQuery.

3.Add jQuery a little at a time.
